THE TWO VILLAGES.

Ovar the river on the hill, Lieth a village white and still, All around it the furest trees Shiver and whisper in the breeze; Over it sailing shadows go Of soaring hawk and screeming crow, And mountain grasses, low and sweet Grow in the middle of every street.

Another village lieth still ; There I see in the cloudy night, Twickling sters of bousehold light, Fires that gleam from the smithy's door, Miste that curl on the river shore ; And in the roads no grasses grow, For the wheels that hasten to and fro.

In that village on the bill, Never is sound of smith or mill: The bouses are thatched with grass and Never a clock to tell the hours ; The marble doors are always shut, You cannot enter in ball or but, All the village lay seleep ; Never a grain to sow or reap; Never in dreams to mean or sigh, Silent and idle, and low they lie.

In that village under the bill, When the night is starry and still, Many a weary soul in prayer Lu ke to the other village there, And weeping and sighing, longs to go Un to that home from this below: Longs to sleep by the forest wide, Whisher has vanished wife and child, And beareth, praying, this answer fell-"Patience! that village shall hold ye alf!"

comments: "The 'Old Man of the Mountain,' an object saored in the eyes of sarages, bears this shameful brand upon his brow. Beautiful 'Echo Lake' has put escaped the desecration. the 'Old Man' bathee his foot is thus disfigured .-Almost every step taken leading to the wonderful Flume,' the foot rests upon this blackened text .-The sancing of the romantic 'Pool' has likewise been invaded; and even Mount Washington, the crowning glory of all, has been defiled by cenary hand of man. The trees whisper it, the mountains schoe it, the executes murmur it-above, below, behind, before, the self-same text encompasses you; fly from it you cannot. I know not its effect upon visitore generally, but during my stay it was the sause of general complaint.

It produces a feeling of oppression that Nature her atmost sublimity should be yoked to men's and boys' parments; again, of sadness that no spot on earth can be free from the contamination money; and still again, pity is awakened for the person who rould thus render God's master-pieces suppervient to such valgar purposes."

LIGHT AND SHADOW

BY WILLIAM WINTER

You who judge by what you see, Often fail to judge aright! Stars are shining solemnly, In the day as in the night; All the day they lie concealed By the glory of the sun ; But at eve they shine revealed In the saure, one by one.

So the daylight of a smile May but veil the human face, Hiding, for a little while, Doubt, and care, and sorrow's trace So, when shadow-clouds of woe O'er a happy face arise,

Still beneath the shadows glow

Stars of juy in gentle eyes. Life is arched with changing skies; Rarely are they what they seem; Smiles we have, and also sighs -Much we know, but more we dresu: Look beneath the outward show

To the shadow or the light ! And, from what you surely know, Learn to see and judge aright.

OPENING OF THE ENGLISH STATE PAPER OFFICE. Bitherto the history of the American colonies has been lacking in some vital parts, owing to the restrictions placed upon access to or use of the records preserved in the State Paper office at London. The new and Paney Handberchiefe, Shirt Bosome and polley of the English government has undergone a Collars, change. It is now considered that nothing can be CORDED & SKELETON SKIRTS, RATTAN lost by an exposure of the secrets which up to a recent date have been so rigidly guarded; and the present moment it is not more diffeult to obtain access to any of the records of the State Paper office during the period of the colonial history of the United States, than to the books of a well-regulated library. For two or three years Sir duly calendered and indexed. The records of See will add much valuable matter to the history
